Route: Hammer - Hachau - Habach - junction to the summit - Zinnkopf service hut - Rabenmoosalm - Rindermoos service hut - Sulzberg - Topfenmoos - Hachau - Hammer

This jaunt around the Zinnkopf between Inzell, Ruhpolding and Siegsdorf is best started at the hiking car park in Hammer, alternatively in Inzell/Ramsen (25.6 km/840 m altitude difference). In Hammer, head north-west until just before Hachau, a road branches off to the left, which runs along the Habach up towards the Zinnkopf. It's a lonely ride on wide forest tracks and over many wide hairpin bends to the south. If you want, you can hike to the Zinnkopf on foot. The best lanes continue via the Zinnkopf service hut to the Rabenmoosalm. Here the direction of travel turns to the east. Shortly after the Rindermoos service hut, the road from Inzell/Ramen leads up from the bottom right; you continue straight on here. The road circles the Sulzberg Schneid in a wide arc and leads in a zigzag to the north and past the Topfenmoos back down to Hammer.

Highlights: the lonely and hut-free forest experience, the view from the Zinnkopf summit (excursion on foot)

Bike & Hike: You can climb the Zinnkopf (1227 m) from the highest point of the circuit in front of the Zinnkopf service hut.
